

Marianna Patrona

Associate Professor

Division of Humanities

Hellenic Army Academy

Evelpidon Avenue, 166 72 Vari, Greece

Email: marianna.patrona@gmail.com

Marianna Patrona is Associate Professor in English at the Hellenic Army Academy, Greece. She holds a BA in English Language and Literature from the University of Athens, an M.Phil. in Linguistics from the University of Cambridge (UK), and a Ph.D. in Sociolinguistics from King's College London, University of London.

She has published extensively in various discourse and communication journals and edited volumes and has recently edited the collective volume Crisis and the Media: Narratives of Crisis across Cultural Settings and Media Genres (John Benjamins 2018, Discourse Approaches to Politics, Society and Culture series). She has participated in various international research projects and is a reviewer for highly acclaimed peer-reviewed journals in the field.

Her research interests include media discourse and communication; broadcast interviewing; discourse and politics; changing communication practices in broadcast news; political communication, journalism and crisis; media & populism: the new challenges for Journalism; propaganda & disinformation in the old & new media.